

Christine Reichow AWS NWS TWSA SWS WW FWS

Growing up in rural Michigan, Christine developed a love of nature. At an early age, her father taught her to observe the nesting birds and to identify their individual melodic warbling. The name of each tree, plant and flower became familiar to her as a result of her father's influence.

Christine was inspired by her mother, a lifelong artist, to study art and design. She chose to major in clothing and textiles at Michigan State University and created hand-dyed and hand-woven pieces using natural textiles. Upon completion of her studies, she continued to be an active member of the Michigan Weavers Guild and began painting on silk to create one-of-a-kind clothing. Her unique "wearable art" was displayed in prestigious boutiques from Detroit to New York. She opened her own boutique in Howell, Michigan where she sold her pieces along with other artist's work for ten successful years.

Christine moved from Michigan to Florida where the wonders of nature inspired her to paint. With the ability to blend colors and create luminosity, watercolor became her media of choice to showcase Florida's natural beauty. "I strive to stir emotion. My desire is for the beholder to experience the serenity of a landscape, the splendor of a bird, the richness of a flower."

Christine Reichow is a renowned watercolor artist. Nature is her subject of choice. Her work hangs in public and private collections throughout the world. Along with magazine, newspaper and television features, she has received numerous national awards.
